America [1776–1789]

Cooke, Alistair, America, p.131

'The Articles of Confederation are now seen by every historian to have been unworkable from the start (a fine example of the football coach's remark that "hindsight is always 20/20"). As an instrument looking not so much toward a noble and harmonious world as to the actual government of a scattering of small nations, it is quite as impressive as the Charter of the United Nations, another noble document of dubious practicality. The Articles presumed to set up "a firm league of friendship" that, in some hazy, undefined way, would serve as a practical substitute for Crown and Parliament. They suffered from the pious inhibitions and optimistic assumptions of later leagues of nations. Congress piously requested troops and money and never got them – it had no power to raise federal taxes to support the central government. Worse, it could not regulate shipping or commerce – it could but only deplore the piratical depredations of the exenemy's navy, and the free and easy way in which the states taxed and boycotted each other's goods. The fatal weakness was that of the later League of Nations and then of the United Nations: Congress kept talking about an overriding authority that, in fact, it never possessed.'

France [5 August 1789 – 1795 Dissolution of the Convention]

Part 2 – Creating a new Society

Question 3

McPhee, Peter, The French Revolution, 1789-1799, p.151

'It was above all the battle of Fleurus (26 June) – finally ending the threat of Austrian troops on French soil – which exposed the contradictions in the popular alliance of the year II. The geographic incidence of executions during the terror had been concentrated in departments where the military threat had been the greatest; now, as the military threat receded, the number of executions for political opposition increased. The removal of the immediate military threat starkly exposed the new purpose for which the Terror was being used: from March 1793 to 10 June 1794, 1,251 were executed in Paris; following the law of 22 Prairial (10 June), 1,376 were guillotined in just six weeks. These weeks were not a time of unremitting repression; in mid-July seventy-one Girondin deputies who might have joined their fellows at the guillotine in October 1973 but for Robespierre's intervention were reinstated as full members of the Convention. However, they were not in a forgiving mood. Robespierre's speech to the Convention on 26 July (8 Thermidor), with its vague threat to unnamed deputies, provided the motivation for reaction. Among those who plotted his overthrow were Fouché, Collot d'Herbois, Fréron, and Barras, fearful that Robespierre intended to call them to account for their bloody repression of Federalism in Lyons, Toulon, and Marseilles. When he was arrested the following day, he could not look for support to the sans-culottes' movement, shattered by the Jacobins' own measures, the death of its leaders, and the alienation of wage earners. Only seventeen of the forty-eight sections responded to calls to save him, and soon dispersed.'

Question 3

Russia [November 1917 – 1924 death of Lenin]

Rosenberg, William G, 'NEP Russia as a "Transitional" society in Fitzpatrick, Sheila et. al. (ed.), Russia in the Era of NEP – Explorations in Russian Society and Culture, p.1

'As students of Soviet history know quite well, the period between the end of the Civil War and the onslaught of collectivization and rapid industrialization in late 1929 is known as NEP because of a series of new economic policies introduced by the Bolsheviks in the spring of 1921. These had to do first and foremost with ending food requisitions from the countryside and eliminating tight restrictions on private trade and production. With victory in the Civil War assured, the confiscation of grain and the effort to maintain rigid controls on the pricing and distribution of goods no longer made political or economic sense. Wholesale peasant resistance had culminated in massive uprisings in Tambov province late in 1920, just as the anti-Bolshevik "Whites" and their European allies were being defeated. Workers in Petrograd and elsewhere appeared on the verge of revolt over scarcities and harsh working conditions. Opposition had broken out openly within the party itself. Early in March 1921 sailors at Kronstadt seized the island fortress to demand "land and bread" and a Soviet government without the Bolsheviks. Bolshevik leaders everywhere were quickly persuaded that the party had to retreat, at least for a time, that the policies of "War Communism" had to give way to a more relaxed period of recovery and transition.'

Question 3

China [1949 – 1976 death of Mao]

Snow, Edgar, 'The Other Side of the River' in Morcombe, Margot and Fielding, Mark, The Spirit of Change – China in Revolution, p.175

'[The Communes suffered because of] the incredible haste with which they were established; the lack of adequate experimentation and preparation; the suddenness of the mass levelling imposed on the prosperous villagers and the prosperous individual farmers when they were equalised with the poorer ones; the lack of incentives to replace the drastic withdrawal of autonomous village control; the threat to home life before a broad community life had been fully established to replace it; the enormous technical responsibility and initiative demanded from inexperienced and poorly trained cadres, and the ruthless disregard of 'the principle of voluntariness' by a vast army of township bureaucrats who mushroomed overnight and began to take charge of every hour of the people's lives. When unbelievably bad weather added its powerfully negative vote, the communes were rapidly driven back into a preparatory stage which the party tried to jump over in 1958 – at great cost to production'.
